HOME NEWS.

Yamhill county has paid its entire State tax.

Wheat is selling at one dollar a bushel in Jacksonville.

Boats now get through the draw-bridge on the Yamhill river.

The benefits of Mr. Vinson and Mr. Cox were both largely attended.

Samuel Piercy will have a benefit this (Friday) evening at Oro Fino Theater.

The State Treasury now contains a larger proportion of silver than ever before.

During 1872 there were 125,995 tons of coal exported from Coos Bay to San Francisco.

A monthly publication devoted to the real estate interests, is soon to be started at La Grande.

The salary of the Superintendent of Schools in Union county has been fixed at $300 per annum.

Some of the farmers of Linn county are rejoicing in fields of volunteer wheat that promise much.

The new comedy of "School" has been upon the boards at the Theater, during the past week, and the audiences are very large.

The winter schedule, as arranged for the overland stage from Roseburg, Oregon, to Redding, California, allows four days for making the trip between these two points.

The printing of the laws passed at the last session of the Legislature has been finished by the State Printer, and the volume can be had on application to the Secretary of State.

The Commissioner of Pensions has decided that the Oregon Volunteers who served under Captain Jesse Walker and Captain Nathan Olney, in 1854, are entitled to land warrants.

The Southern Oregon Steam Navigation Company have filed articles of Incorporation, and stock books are now open. They propose to build a steamer and run up the Coquille river.

A company has been incorporated in Coos county for the purpose of building a narrow gauge railroad from Isthmus Slough to the Coquille river. Capital stock, $200,000. Incorporators, Messrs. Utter, Besse and Cannon. Subscription for stock is being solicited on the Coquille and the Bay.

The Scotland says the following figures concerning our State lands embrace a period of nearly two years: Number of acres of land sold of the 500,000 acre grant, 128,742 to 100,000 acres. Notes outstanding, $73,618 55. Interest paid on notes during last two years, $9,586 54. Notes paid in full, $21,192 91.

The Statenman says that Mr. William Ruble, of Polk county, will address the farmers and business men of Marion and Polk counties at the Court House in Salem, at one o'clock p. m., January 26th, on the general farming and business interests of the valley, and particularly on the matter of a Farmers' Transportation Company.

The Roseburg Postgraph says: The immense quantity of copper, coal, chrome, iron, and other minerals which are found in abundance in southern Oregon, and only waiting for some means of quick transportation, would produce an income of untold wealth to the producers, and be a source of exhaustless income to the State.

The officers of the Highland Farm Club, for Marion, for 1873, are R. C. Geer, President; K. L. Hubbard and L. F. Mascher, Vice-Presidents; T. W. Dawson, Secretary; R. Leonard, Treasurer. At its last meeting the club discussed the question: "Resolved, That raising grain for the market is not the best policy for farmers in the Highland district."

The Methodist Episcopal Church South, under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Dawne, was organized in Salem last Sabbath. Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen went into the organization. The enterprise is a missionary one under the auspices of the Home Board of the M. E. C. South. For the present they hold services every morning and evening in the State Library, but intend building a house of worship in the spring.

The Times, Jackson county, says: "Sufficient rain has already fallen to indicate the character of the winter season. That it will not be a dry one is certain. Farmers generally are so positive of this that they have been making preparations for larger operations than ever before. So far as known to us there is not a district in the county suffering from lack of moisture. A majority of the farmers have finished sowing, considerable grain already being up, and the prospects are that Jackson county will yield an immense harvest."

The editor of the Dallas Mountaineer, who has been visiting the machine shops of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, says: "From the general appearance of the things and from all we have been able to learn on 'the outside,' we are led to the conclusion that the company anticipate a great rush of business the coming spring and summer. The building of the two hundred and seven miles of railroad from the Columbia river to Pen d'Oreille lake, will of itself require a large amount of transportation, to say nothing of the regular business, and the company seems to be hard at work getting ready for it."

The Mercury says: "The coal fields of Coos county may be said to be almost inexhaustible, and in years to come cannot fail to be a source of wealth to that country. A railroad once constructed to the mines, it will in all probability extend up the Coquille river, opening up the vast forest of cedar, fir, pine, hemlock, maple and myrtle, and on out to the Umpqua valley tap the O. and C. railroad at Roseburg. It has been said the road would never pay, but competent judges now assert to the contrary. The great coal mining and lumbering interests of Coos county must of necessity employ a great army of men to work them, who, of course, cannot engage in agriculture, and must necessarily draw their supplies from abroad. It is idle to assume that the present source of supplies will continue, when an adjoining county offers for sale everything they require at one-third less cost."

The traveling correspondent of the Pacific Railroad Press tells this about Oregon: "The road through Oregon leads through the beautiful valley of the Willamette, the garden and granary of Oregon. Every now and then you see a beautiful farm and pleasant house, which suggests what the country may become. School houses are plenty and their seats well filled. People come here to make homes, and we see large and happy families. The people have too much land and are very anxious to have more settlers. Two of their citizens are on their way East as Commissioners of Emigration. We may expect to hear of their lectures and writings. Mr. Applegate, the chief speaker, once held an audience four hours listening to an extempore speech. It was in a political canvass, and his opponents secured the hall and meant to prevent his having any meeting, but he organized one outside and drew their audience all out to hear him; so people may depend upon it that the advantages of Oregon will be fully stated to our Eastern friends."
